In order to keep the history of Black students here at Hopkins alive I propose that the present name of the Black student Union's Room be officially titled the Kelly Miller Black Student Union Room. This is a proposal in honor of the first Black student to ever attend the Johns Hopkins University. He was a graduate student here in 1887-89. Dr. Miller never did graduate from Hopkins because of financial difficulties forcing him out. After attending Hopkins, Dr. Miller went to Washington DC and taught at the secondary school level. Then he went on to become the Dean of Howard University's School for Arts and Sciences. Before he passed Dr. Miller went on to be recognized as a prominent leader in Who's Who.
